â€¢ The main character gets the chance of going back home, seeing all the ashes and beautiful buckle from the shoe box. The house is literally small for a clumsy cat and half women. There is a chimney and a kitchen cabinet that keep them warm.

There is a mattress to lay on the floor. The main character has to sleep on it with a cat poo. Prinâ€™s cat is bombing and has made the foam his new home. Now, the character has been covered by the cat poo. In turning to the backyard now, there are ashes everywhere and speckles of the plastic from afar.

â€¢ The exciting part of the first chapter of the story is that the main character is hit at the back side of Joanna Masonry. After fainting from extreme pain, he kept on asking â€œWhere am I? Why am I in a river full of ashes? Am I dead? It felt like falling in the trap of amnesia.

â€¢ Doctors taught him about a technique in order to differentiate the things that are for real and are not. They told him about the things for himself by looking at the simple ones and working toward more difficult facts.

â€¢ The character is named as Cat Never Clean. An age of ninety-years old in the dog years, it made him seventeen. He lived in the twelfth district and played the Hungry Cups.
